

Shelby Easley

Shelby Easley is a Seattle based Singer/Songwriter who has been singing, writing music and playing guitar for over 15 years. You can see Shelby playing her original music all over the Seattle area and is currently working on her first demo with Seattle Sound Productions. While she is classically trained in Broadway and opera, her love for different music styles is endless. She was once the singer of a rock/punk band, performs indie folk music around Seattle and has competed with multiple genres including Pop, R&B, Country, Broadway and Jazz (she is also known to rap from time to time). Over the past 4 years, Shelby has taken home a variety of titles along her KWC journey. The most recent accomplishment came in 2018 when she took home a gold medal after becoming the current 2018 US Female KWC National Champion in Vegas, which allowed her to complete on the World Stage in Finland late last year. Her first championship, however, came in 2017 when she took home the gold as the Female Keep on Singing Champion, which means she knows exactly what it takes to be successful in this type of competition. Being a coach truly means the world to her. Over the course of her journey with KWC, Shelby has been coached by some of the very best and is excited to provide that same support and experience to the next group of KWC stars. Shelby is looking for storytellers who are truly open to connecting not only with the song they are singing but with the audience as well, to transcend the traditional idea of what karaoke is. Additionally, Shelby is looking for singers who are committed to working their butt off to grow as an artist during this process. Everyone has room to improve and a competition of this nature is the perfect place to do so.
